

God and Science

The Holy Spirit (God) is eternal and there is no science in eternity because there is no space and time in eternity. Science only exists in the finite, the conscious dimension. The Holy Spirit is all knowing and omniscient, meaning all science, without God there would be no science, and there would be no creation, yet man often tries to realize God from a scientific perspective rather than a spiritual one. This behavior is self-serving and displays absolute denial. God creates energy; and space so energy and mass can function in the conscious dimension (our dimension of space and time) it is therefore subject to our conscious perspective and altered by our free will, the result is chaos. Our science knows that energy is cyclic and is never diminished; science cannot define the origin of the energy. The energy belongs to God and must remain with God; we know that all mass is composed of energy. The energy is orchestrated by God to become creation. This process can be known only onto God. Light is energy that has no mass, so it doesn't occupy space, yet behold light is everywhere, and nothing exists without it. The Holy Bible tells us that God is light and love, in the beginning God said, Let There Be Light. Our science cannot define this process, but God can.

There is a definitive behavioral pattern that all of creation is meant to follow, Gods unconditional love begets unity and unity begets unconditional love, unaltered, this cyclic process is perfect because it returns Gods love to its origin, when we, with our free will put conditions on God's love it is altered and becomes man's love. We can't cast blame on God for the chaos and evil that prevails in our conscious dimension. Our free will creates the evil, and evil creates more evil. It is a compounding problem. If we could follow Gods promise with unconditional love and complete unity, there would be no evil. From our conscious perspective we view this as impossible, giving the self-serving nature of man, so, from our conscious perspective it seems impossible, unless we deny our self-serving nature and turn to God (the Holy Spirit) for guidance. Jesus Christ tries to teach us exactly that. When will we ever learn?
